Chapter I. Authorisation for punishment; scope of penal law ...¹⁾ etc.

■ Art.1 No person shall be punished without being convicted of conduct which is punishable according to law or can be regarded as fully equivalent to conduct that is considered an offence according to law.

□ [Sanctions under Chapter VII of this Act may not be applied unless they are prescribed in the sources referred to in the first paragraph of this Article.]¹⁾

■ Art. 2 Where penal legislation is amended between the commission of a deed and the delivery of judgment, the case shall be judged according to the newer legislation, both as regards the criminality of the deed and the punishment. At no time, however, may punishment be imposed unless it was authorised in law at the time when the deed was committed; nor may a more severe punishment be imposed than would have been imposed under that law. If penal provisions in law have ceased to apply for reasons that do not indicate a change in the legislature's assessment of the criminality of the deed, the case shall be judged according to the law applying when the offence was committed.

□ If the criminality of a deed ceases to apply for reasons other than those described in the preceding paragraph, punishment imposed for the deed shall be waived, to the extent that it has not already been enforced. In addition, other consequences of the deed entailed by its criminality under the older law shall be waived, with the exception of the obligation to pay legal costs. The question of whether punishment imposed is to be waived or reduced in cases where the judgment also covered other offences may be referred to the court which judged the case at the district court level, or to a court in the party's venue. Appeals may be lodged against conclusions by district courts.

■ [Art. 2a Sanctions for the offences referred to in Chapter VII of this Act may not be applied unless they were prescribed in the sources listed in the first paragraph of this article at the time of the offence, and the principles of Article 2 shall be observed when they are determined.]¹⁾

■ Art. 3 When criminal legislation makes repetition of an offence entail a heavier punishment, or other sanctions, a sentence under older law shall have this iterative effect in accordance with its wording as if it had been imposed according to the newer law..

■ Art. 4 Punishment shall be imposed under the Icelandic Penal Code as follows:

1. For offences committed within the Icelandic state. If the offence is committed by a person employed, or by a passenger, on board a foreign ship or aircraft travelling within Icelandic jurisdiction against someone travelling with the craft, or against interests closely associated with the craft, then punishment shall only be imposed in Iceland if [the minister]¹⁾ orders an investigation and prosecution.

2. For offences committed on board Icelandic ships or aircraft, irrespective of where they were at the time. If the offence was committed in a place covered by the criminal jurisdiction of another state under international law, and by a person who was neither a permanent employee nor a passenger on the craft, then punishment shall nevertheless only be imposed in Iceland if this is provided for under Article 5 or 6.

[3. For violations of Article 264 that are committed within the Icelandic state, even if the original offence giving rise to the gain was committed abroad, and irrespective of the identity of the perpetrator.]²⁾

■ Art. 5 Punishment shall be imposed according to the Icelandic Penal Code for offences committed abroad by Icelandic citizens or by persons resident in Iceland as follows.

1. If the offence was committed in a place outside the criminal jurisdiction of other states under international law, provided that it was also punishable at the time under the law of the defendant's home state.

2. If the offence was committed in a place under the criminal jurisdiction of another state under International law, provided it was also punishable at the time under the law of that state.

□ [The provisions of the first paragraph may be applied to deeds by a person who is a citizen of Denmark, Finland, Norway or Sweden, or is domiciled there, and who is resident in Iceland.]¹⁾

□ [In the instances covered in item 2 of the first paragraph, punishment shall be imposed under the Icelandic Penal Code for offences committed by a person who was an Icelandic citizen, or was domiciled in Iceland, at the time of the deed, which are covered by the second, third or fourth paragraph of Article 206, the first paragraph of Article 210 b, Article 218 a and item 2 of the first paragraph of Article 227 a, and were committed abroad even if the deed is not considered a punishable offence under the laws of the state involved. The same shall apply to violations committed against a child under the age of 15 which come under Article 194, 197-198, 200-201 and the first paragraph of Article 202, and offences under the first paragraph of Article 210 a, providing they involve the production of items listed there.]²⁾

Chapter II. General conditions for punishment.

■ Art. 12 An act committed as an emergency defence measure shall not be punishable to the extent that it was necessary in defence against, or to avert, an unlawful attack that was already initiated or was imminent, provided that the defensive measures taken were not obviously more dangerous than were warranted by the attack and the injury or damage it could be expected to cause.

A person who has exceeded the limits of permitted emergency defence as a result of having been so frightened or startled that he or she could not exercise full restraint, shall not be punished.

■ Art. 13 Any act that was necessary in order to protect lawful interests against imminent danger shall not be punishable, even if it led to the abridgement of other interests that must be regarded as considerably smaller.

■ Art. 14 No person shall be punished for a deed committed before he or she attained the age of 15 years.

■ Art. 15 Persons who, due to mental illness, mental retardation or degeneration, diminished cognition or another comparable condition were completely incapable of controlling their actions at the time of the commission of the deed shall not be punished.

■ Art. 16 If the perpetrator of a deed had impaired mental capacity due, for example, to retardation, degeneration, abnormal sexual development or other disturbance, this condition not being as pronounced as is described in Article 15, he or she shall be punished for the offence if, as appropriate and after medical opinion has been obtained, it is reasonable to consider that punishment will produce results.

□ If an institution intended for persons such as those mentioned in this Article is established, it may be stated in the sentence that the offender is to serve his or her [sentence]¹⁾ in that institution.

■ Art. 17 Punishment shall be imposed even though the offence was committed while the perpetrator was drunk or under the influence of other intoxicants. In cases of complete lack of self-awareness, however, punishment shall not be imposed unless the accused knew in advance, or had full reason to be aware, that he would commit the offence while under the influence, or that the offence would follow from his or her being in that condition.

■ Art. 18 Deeds for which punishments are prescribed in this Act are not punishable unless they are committed by intent or through negligence. Punishment shall only be imposed for offences committed through negligence if special authorisation for this is made in this Act.

■ Art. 19 If the criminality of a deed, or aggravation of the punishment for it, is made contingent in this Act on its having specific consequences, then this condition shall not be considered met unless the consequences, at least, may be attributed to the defendant's negligence, or the fact that the defendant made no effort to avert as far as possible the danger that the deed entailed when he or she became aware of it.

[Chapter II A. Criminal liability of legal persons.]¹⁾

■ [Art. 19 a Legal persons may be fined where this is prescribed in law.]¹⁾

■ [Art. 19 b Provisions in law on the criminal liability of legal persons shall apply, subject to any limitations provided for therein, to any entity which, while not being a natural person, is capable of enjoying rights and bearing duties under Icelandic law, including public limited companies, private limited companies, companies with mixed liability of owners, European Interest Groupings, partnership companies, co-operative societies, public associations, private foundations, administrative authorities, institutions and municipalities.]¹⁾

■ [Art. 19 c Unless other provisions are made in law, the criminal liability of a legal person is subject to the condition that a person in charge of the legal person, or its employee or another person under its auspices has, in a criminal manner, committed a criminal and unlawful act in the operations of the legal person. Punishment shall be imposed on the legal person even though it cannot be established which of these parties was involved. Criminal liability of a government authority is subject to the condition that a criminal and unlawful act has been committed in operations that are considered comparable with those of a private entity.]¹⁾

■ [Art. 19 d If the conditions of provisions in this Chapter are met, the legal person may be made to incur criminal liability for violations of this Act [and deprivation of rights according to the second paragraph of Article 68]¹⁾]²⁾

Chapter III. Attempts and capacity as an accessory.

■ Art. 20 Any person who has resolved to commit an act punishable under this Act and has clearly demonstrated this resolve by an act aimed at commission or designed as such is, if the offence has not been brought to completion, guilty of an attempted offence.

□ For an attempted offence, a more lenient punishment may be imposed than for a completed offence. This shall, in particular, be done in cases where the attempt indicates that the offender is less dangerous and his/her resolution not as firm as that of persons who bring such offences to completion.

□ If, in terms of the interests targeted or the act itself, the attempt could not have resulted in the offence being brought to completion, it may be decided that punishment is to be waived.

■ Art. 21 Punishment for an attempted offence shall be waived if the person guilty of it abandons, of his or her own accord, the decision to commit the offence before it is brought to completion, providing its commission was not aborted or obstructions or other accidental circumstances did not prevent the attainment of the intended result and, assuming that the perpetrator, through his or her action, caused or believed he or she had caused, a danger that the offence would be brought to completion, he or she moreover prevented this, or took measures which would have prevented it, if the completion of the offence had not been hindered in another manner, without his or her knowledge, or been impossible.

■ Art. 22 Any person who, by assisting in word or deed, through persuasion, encouragement or in any other manner, contributes to the commission of an offence under this Act shall incur the punishment prescribed for the offence.

□ If the share of a contributor to the offence is minor, or if it consists of strengthening another person's resolve that has already been formed, and if the offence is not brought to completion or if the intended participation in it is unsuccessful, the contributor may be sentenced to a more lenient punishment than is prescribed in law for the offence.

□ Under the circumstances described in the second paragraph, and also if a person has chanced by negligence to participate in an offence, punishment may be waived if the offence falls under a punitive provision in which the prescribed punishment is not greater than [up to one year's imprisonment].¹⁾

□ If the offence is brought to completion, a person who provides the actual perpetrator or another person with assistance in maintaining an unlawful situation that has come into being as a result of the offence, or who derives profit from it, shall be punished according to the provisions of this Article providing that his or her actions are not covered by other provisions in law.

■ Art. 23 An accessory to an offence shall not be punished if he or she averts an offence or takes measures in the way described in Article 21 that would have prevented it had its realisation not, without his or her knowing, been aborted in another manner, failed or been impossible.

Chapter IV. [Private criminal proceedings.]¹⁾

■ Art. 25 If the prosecution authority is not obliged to institute proceedings ...¹⁾ on the basis of an offence ...¹⁾ then only the injured party ...¹⁾ may institute proceedings.

□ If the injured party is not legally competent, the person who has custody over the party shall appear on his or her behalf. If it is considered necessary, a special legal guardian may be appointed for this purpose.

□ If the injured party is deceased, or if an act committed against a deceased party is punishable, then the husband, wife, parents, children, adopted children, [grandchildren]²⁾ siblings of the deceased shall be entitled to institute proceedings ...¹⁾

■ Art. 56 [When a person has confessed to an offence, the [prosecutor]^b may defer for a specific period an indictment for punishment on account of it as follows.

1. On account of offences committed by young people aged 15–21 years.

2. When the defendant's condition is such that supervision or other measures under the third paragraph of Article 57 may be considered more likely than punishment to produce results, providing that the offence is not of such a nature that the public interest demands prosecution.

□ The period of suspension may not be shorter than 1 year or longer than 5 years. In general, it shall be determined as 2–3 years. [The prosecutor]^b shall specify in each individual case when the period begins.

□ When an indictment is deferred, the conditions enumerated in the third paragraph of Article 57 may be imposed on the person as considered appropriate. These conditions may be changed during the suspension period; this authorisation shall include a lengthening of the period, though not to a total of more than 5 years.

□ [The party's case may be reopened if, before the end of the suspension period, a police investigation is initiated in which he or she is suspected of having committed a new offence during the suspension period or prior to the suspension, and also if he or she violates, in substantial aspects, the conditions imposed.]^b

a. Determination of punishment.

The suspension period may not be shorter than one year or longer than 5 years.

In general, it shall be determined as 2–3 years. The beginning of the suspension period shall be determined in the judgment in each individual case.

Deferment shall be subject to the condition that the party does not commit a new offence during the suspension period (cf. Article 60). Deferment may also be made subject to the following conditions.

1. That the party will be under supervision by specific persons, or a society or institution, during the suspension period. The party shall generally be under such supervision if he or she is set conditions under items 2-5 below.

2. That the party will obey the supervisor's instructions regarding place of residence, education, employment, contact with other persons and leisure activities.

3. That the party will not consume alcohol or narcotics during the suspension period.

4. That the party agree to be placed in a home for a specific period, if this is thought necessary, of up to 18 months when it is necessary to break him or her of the habit of abusing alcohol or narcotics, and otherwise for up to 1 year.

5. That the party accept restrictions on the use of his or her income or other matters relating to his or her financial standing.

6. That the party pay compensation, in accordance with his or her ability, for damage caused by his or her offence.

Chapter VII. Security measures, deprivation of civil rights and confiscation of assets.

■ Art. 62 If a person is acquitted under Article 15, or the conclusion of a judgment is, under Article 16, that punishment would serve no purpose, it may then be determined in a judgment, if it is considered necessary in terms of legal certainty, that measures are to be taken to prevent the person constituting a hazard. If it may be considered that milder measures, such as bail, a prohibition on being in certain places or the deprivation of legal competence would not be of any use, it may be decided that the person be placed in an appropriate home. The Supreme Court shall then appoint a supervisor for the person who shall monitor to ensure that his or her stay in the home shall not last longer than is necessary. When there is considered to be reason, the [minister]¹⁾ shall seek a ruling from the district court in the area where the home is located as to whether the aforesaid measures are considered as still being necessary, providing that the opinion of a physician has been sought. In addition, when a year has elapsed since delivery of the judgment or the last court ruling, or earlier if the [minister]¹⁾ approves, the supervisor may demand that the case be submitted anew for a ruling by the court referred to above. [Procedure in cases under this Article shall be in accordance with the Code of Criminal Procedure.]²⁾

■ Art. 63 If a person's condition has been as described in Article 15 or Article 16 over a long period after he or she has committed a punishable offence but before a final judgment has been delivered in his or her case, the court may then decide whether punishment is to be imposed or should be waived. If it is considered that the conditions of Article 62 are met, it may be decided in the judgment that the measures taken under that Article are to be applied instead of punishment, or until it is considered possible to execute punishment.

■ Art. 65 [If it is considered evident from the facts of the case, and after the opinion of a physician has been sought, that an offender who has committed an offence under the influence of alcohol is not capable of controlling his or her craving for alcohol, it may be determined in a judgment that he or she is to be placed in an appropriate home for treatment.]¹⁾ In such a case, the judgment shall provide for placement in the home for up to 18 months or, in the case of a repeated offence, for up to 3 years. [The minister]²⁾ shall decide, in accordance with the proposals of the governing board of the home and the physician involved, whether the person may be released from the home before the maximum period stated above has passed, because he or she may be regarded as cured.

■ Art. 66 If anyone vows to harm another person or threatens another person with death, arson or other mischief, and punishment either cannot be applied or is considered not to provide adequate security, the prosecution may take steps, either at the request of the person concerned or without such request, if it considers it necessary in view of legal certainty, to have a court ruling delivered as to whether measures are to be taken to prevent the threat from being carried out, including whether the person making the threat is to pay bail or should be taken into custody. A court may rescind such measures if they are no longer considered necessary due to changed circumstances.

□ If the prosecution so wishes, the case may be referred at any time for a new ruling by a court. The person against whom the ruling is directed may in all cases also demand, when 6 months have passed since the sentence was passed or the last ruling was delivered, and earlier if the prosecution gives its consent, that the matter be referred anew to a court on official instigation.

□ A person found guilty of an offence may then, in [a criminal case]¹⁾ brought against him or her, be deprived of the right he or she has acquired to engage in an activity for which an official licence, authorisation in law, appointment or the passing of an examination is required, providing the offence indicates that there is a substantial risk that the convicted person will commit an offence in his or her position or activity. In cases of gross violation, the person may also be deprived of the right described above if he or she is no longer regarded as worthy to pursue the position or exercise the entitlement.

Liens on items that are confiscated may only be lifted in accordance with the decision of a court in cases where the lien-holder is not in good faith.

If any of the persons named in the first and second paragraphs takes measures, after the commission of the offence, regarding ownership or lien rights on gains or items that are to be confiscated, the gains or items may be confiscated from a third party if he or she was aware of the connection between the gains or items and the offence or has demonstrated gross negligence in that regard. Chapter VIII. Factors influencing the severity of punishment.

■ Art. 70 When punishment is decided, the following factors, in particular, are to be considered.

1. The importance of the object of the offence.
2. The extent of the damage or loss caused.
3. How much of a threat the action posed, particularly when consideration is given to when, where and how it was carried out.
4. The age of the perpetrator.
5. The perpetrator's former conduct.
6. The strength and degree of the perpetrator's resolve.
7. The perpetrator's motive.
8. The perpetrator's conduct after committing the offence.
- [9. Whether he gave, on his own initiative, assistance or information that was of substantial significance for the establishment of his offence, the participation of other persons in the offence or other offences]¹⁾

Where more than one person collaborated in the commission of the offence, this shall normally be considered as aggravating the punishment.

[If the action was directed against a man, woman or child closely related to the perpetrator, and the relationship between them is considered as having aggravated the seriousness of the offence, this shall normally be considered as aggravating the punishment.]²⁾

■ Art. 71 When the law provides for, or permits, a more severe punishment or other sanction in the event of a repeated offence, such provision may not be applied unless, prior to the commission of the latter offence, the offender was convicted of an offence or punished in Iceland for an offence which has an iterative effect on the latter offence, or for an attempted offence or acting as an accessory to such an offence, and in addition must have attained the age of 18 when he or she committed the former offence.

The courts may allow sentences passed abroad to have an iterative effect as if they had been passed in Iceland.

Iterative effects shall cease to apply when 5 years have elapsed since the perpetrator served his or her former sentence, or since it expired or was lifted, before the commission of the latter offence. If the former punishment took the form of a fine, the period shall be counted as running from the date on which final judgment was delivered or the perpetrator agreed to pay the fine.

■ Art. 72 Where a person has become an habitual offender, committing one or more types of crime, or commits crimes on a professional basis, punishment may be increased by the addition of up to one half. If this is repeated, the punishment may be doubled.

□ The provisions of the first sentence of the preceding paragraph may also be applied when the offence mentioned there is committed by a former prison convict against the superiors or staff of the penal institution where he or she was held, or when the offence is directed against the institution or its property, and also when a former prison convict commits an offence against the provisions of Article 111 involving prisoners serving sentences in the penal institution in which he or she was held.

□ If a person who has been sentenced to life imprisonment and has not been pardoned commits a new offence inside or outside the prison, it shall be determined in a judgment what punishment would have been imposed if the previous punishment had not been life imprisonment. ■ Art. 74 The punishment prescribed in law for an offence may be reduced to below the minimum specified under the following circumstances.

1. When someone has exceeded the limits of an emergency defence measure or emergency action.

2. When the offence was committed by a person who at the time had not reached the age of 18 and it may be argued that in view of his or her youth, full punishment would not be necessary or would be harmful. In no case may the punishment imposed for offences committed by persons under this age exceed 8 years' imprisonment.

3. If the perpetrator believed that the deed he or she committed did not constitute a violation of the law, this being either due to excusable ignorance of the law or a misunderstanding of the legal provisions prohibiting the commission of the action.

4. Where someone has committed an offence in extreme anger or in great mental agitation aroused by the offended party through an unlawful attack or grave insult.

5. Where someone is persuaded to commit an offence due to dependence on another person.

6. Where someone is compelled to commit an offence, though the compulsion is not of such a nature as to make the action completely non-punishable.

7. Where the perpetrator, acting on his or her own initiative, averted the danger that it involved.

8. Where the perpetrator, acting on his or her own initiative, made full compensation for the damage or loss that resulted from it, and also where he or she made great efforts to prevent the harmful consequences of the offence, or made all efforts within his or her power to remedy the damage or loss.

9. Where the perpetrator, acting on his or her own initiative, reports the offence and gives a full account of all the circumstances relating to it [or gives, on his or her own initiative, assistance or information that is of substantial significance for the establishment of his offence, the participation of other persons in the offence or other offences.]¹⁾

Under the circumstances covered in items 1-8 it may be decided that punishment is to be waived in full.

■ Art. 75 If a person commits an offence in extreme mental excitement, or due to an otherwise temporary state of mental imbalance, or if other circumstances are such that the action is not considered as punishable as is generally the case with offences of the same type, then punishment may be reduced and even, if the offence is not punishable by a more severe punishment than [up to 1 year's imprisonment],²⁾ waived. If the perpetrator put himself or herself into the condition described through the consumption of alcohol, the application of this provision may only be considered if there are extenuating circumstances and the perpetrator has not previously been convicted of an offence of the same, or similar, type or of an offence against the first or second paragraph of Article 123.

■ Art. 76 Where the offender was held in detention and this is not on account of his or her conduct during the prosecution of the case or its investigation, it shall be decided in the judgment that all or part of the detention period shall take the place of punishment..

■ Art. 77 If, while the same case is being heard, a person is found guilty of the commission of more than one offence, punishment for them shall be determined jointly in one sentence in such a way that they will both or all be covered; if life imprisonment is the punishment prescribed for the most serious offence then no further punishments shall be imposed for the others.

Punishment shall normally be determined within the limits laid down in the penal provision covering the offences; if they are not all covered by the same penal provision, then within the limits laid down by the penal provision specifying the most serious punishment. Nevertheless, according to the circumstances of the case, the punishment may be aggravated by the addition of up to one half of it. However, the courts may, in cases when a person is sentenced at the same time for a serious offence and another which is relatively trivial, apply even the lightest punishment prescribed for the more serious offence.

■ Art. 266 If a prisoner who is not serving a sentence, or a prisoner who is serving time for per diem fines or child maintenance payments commits a breach of discipline, the same punishment may be imposed on him or her as is specified in Article 47 of the Remand Prisoners Act, as provided for in further detail [in a Regulation].¹⁾ However, the sanction imposed may not result in a lengthening of the time spent in prison.

The provisions of Article 48 may be applied to such prisoners, as appropriate.
